

International Conference

Environment and Natural Resources Management in Developing and Transition Economies

CERDI - Clermont Ferrand – 18 – 19 November 2010

You are invited to contribute on the following fields:

- Biodiversity
- Environmental law history and comparative law;
- Environmental shocks and / or drastic changes in natural environment in developing and emerging countries (e. g. climate change);
- Focus on emerging countries such as Brazil, China as well as India.
- International governance and environmental treaties;
- Natural resources management: forest, exhaustible resources, water. Natural resources management depends on national policies as well as the quality of institutions. At the micro level, conflicts exist which are often generated by poor or ill defined property rights: it is worth understanding the way these conflicts may appear and how they can be resolved;
- Link between outward looking policies and the environment and natural resources management: which role for foreign direct investments, international trade or sovereign funds?
- Poverty alleviation and the environment;
- Etc.

Papers should be submitted in MS Word format by Email to Pascale Combes Motel by October 1st, 2010 at the address: environment.conference2010@cerdi.org. Each submission should indicate authors' names and affiliations, postal addresses and emails of presenting authors. Notification of acceptance will be made by October 15th, 2010.
